In case the box does not work, go to the next nearest station; you can procure a key at a store or dwelling in the vicinity.

Names belonging in Fruitvale, Golden Gate, Temescal, and Emeryville, will be found in the Oakland portion of the work, as it is found more satisfactory to have them arranged in this manner, owing to the boundaries being so indefinite, and it will lessen the trouble of searching for names.

ALAMEDA.

THE CITY OF ALAMEDA (pronounced ah-la-may-dah) is about seven miles from San Francisco, and communicates therewith by two lines of railway, with their connecting ferries. The city occupies a peninsula four miles long by about a mile in width, formerly called the "Encinal de San Antonio," from the grove of live oaks by which it was covered. Enough of the oaks still remain to give a charming rural aspect to the city, though beneath their grateful shade stretch miles upon miles of macadamized streets and artificial stone sidewalks, and above their highest boughs hang myriad electric sparks that light the Alamedan to thousands of beautiful homes, surrounded by verdant lawns and beds of flowers. Alameda has about 13,500 inhabitants. In 1880 the population was 5,708, and in 1870, 1,557.

BERKELEY.

Berkeley lies on the eastern shore of San Francisco Bay, about five miles north of Oakland, and facing the Golden Gate. It has about two miles of water front upon the bay, and extends eastward and inland about three and one-half miles, to the tops of the first range of mountains. It was organized under a special town charter in 1878. East Berkeley, comprising the east two-thirds of the town, is the seat of the State University, and contains numerous private schools, besides one of the best public schools in the State, from which students enter the University without futher examination. The town is lighted by electricity, has a complete sewer system, the streets are being macadamized, and it is a thriving and growing town. The present population is about 6,500.
